The graph plots 'Days after start of growing season' on the x-axis (0 to 100) against 'Days until start of growing season' on the y-axis (0 to 100). A solid line represents the 'Theoretical' relationship, which is a straight line from (0,0) to (100,100). A dashed line represents the 'Observed' relationship, which follows the theoretical line closely until about day 50, then drops significantly, reaching approximately 20 days until the start of the growing season by day 100. Data points are marked with asterisks (*) along the dashed line.

It is a scholar's task to not only to write but to write for an audience. In this sense, the book is a gift to the community of scholars and to the general public alike. The book is a gem, and it is a pleasure to read it. The author's writing is clear, concise, and engaging. The book is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of the United States.
